

Andrea Brown Riley (she/her) is the incoming Protective Services Coordinator for the WVCADV. She joins the team after 6 years of dedicated victim advocacy with the Eastern Panhandle Empowerment Center, a dual program serving victims and survivors of domestic violence, sexual assault, human trafficking, stalking, and teen relationship violence. She began her career with EPEC as a victim advocate and then moved into the role of DV specialist, which grew her passion for DLAG and the SAFeR model, and allowed her to discover her love of community engagement and action as the Berkeley County DV Task Force co-coordinator. Her remaining 3 years were spent in the role of the director of shelter services, ensuring the shelter program was victim centered, and incorporating harm reduction and equity to every part of shelter service delivery. Andrea has also served as an expert witness in cases of domestic violence and sexual assault, and has provided many community trainings and presentations on interpersonal violence.
