

Amy M. Keating is an attorney in Zashin & Rich Co., L.P.A.'s Domestic Relations Practice Group, handling all aspects of family law matters, including international custody and abduction issues. She is a fellow of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers and an OSBA Certified Specialist in Family Relations Law. Amy is also an adjunct professor and Case Western University Law School where she co-teaches both introductory Family Law and an advanced seminar on select family law issues.

Amy was recognized as a Super Lawyers "Rising Star" from 2014 through 2019, and has been further recognized by Best Lawyers each year from 2016 through 2020, including earning the distinction of the "2019 Lawyer of the Year for Family Law in Cleveland".

Amy is the co-author of several articles on family law topics, including "Filling the Gaps with Public Policy: The Application of the Hague Convention Protocol in the US Courts in the Absence of a Co-Signing State", published by the International Journal of Law, Policy and the Family at Oxford University. She has been a presenter or co-presenter on family law topics, including the 2019 AAML Ohio Family Law Symposium and Judicial Conference of the Eighth Judicial District of Ohio (2015).