Outside the Box: Creative Solutions to Difficult Issues

In this interactive session, two financial experts and an attorney will lead a discussion on how advancing communications between an expert and counsel can brainstorm unique solutions to get around roadblocks in preparing your case. For example, out of the box solutions can be found to determining reasonable compensation when no public information is available or when dealing with tricky assets and businesses. The presenters hope that by looking at real life examples of how breaking the mold broke the logjam, we can all be reminded to, at least sometimes, think outside the box.

Foolproof Witnesses: Practice Tips from an Expert

Preparing your witnesses can be extremely frustrating. No matter how long you prep, you still worry. Will they be confident on the stand or melt down? A communication expert shares her practices to help get the best out of your most challenging witnesses: To quickly stop counterproductive, annoying, or bad habits; to “diagnose” behaviors that stand in the way of confident behavior on the stand; to help witnesses organize and condense the information in their heads so they deliver testimony in a calm clear, composed manner; to tweak your prep style to get better testimony from your witnesses.

Pathways to Healthy Families

This in-depth session will focus on the high-conflict traits of parents and how we as attorneys and “first responders,” can identify and assist those parents who have the capabilities and desire to successfully transition from high-conflict to healthy co-parenting. As part of this presentation, we’ll have an up-close, retrospective look at a real family who successfully employed these skills.

The Power of Personality

Thursday's session will focus on identifying those parents who, early in their dissolution cases, can recognize the benefits and utilize the skills for healthy co-parenting. This session turns our attention to those high-conflict cases headed for trial. The presenters will focus on understanding how personality traits impact co-parenting outcomes and best tips for coaching clients on how their personalities can make or break their shared parenting cases.
